worms #6
“freedom”

story & words:
Brian John Mitchell
artwork:
Kimberlee Traub

After escaping from a series of medical experiments in which her body became the host to some kind of alien worms, our girl jumped into a huge tank & was swallowed by a giant worm.

The jaws of the worm feel like my father's arms.

Safe & comforting.

In some way I am a part of it...

...& it is part of me.

I want us to be free.

My muscles tense.

The worm starts to writhe.

Smashing against the walls of the tank.

The metal walls
start to bend.

We smash through.

Spilling out into the open air.

Followed by three other giant worms.

Some of the soldiers
start shooting at us.

They are crushed by the other worms.

I smash my worm
into the ground.

Going down into the facility that held me captive for so long.

The facility attacks us.

Trying to kill me
& the worm with blue electricity.

But I am strong.

The pain just purifies me.

It fuels my purpose.

I'll destroy this place.

I turn it into a rubble filled hole
in the ground.

I guide the worm
back to the surface.

I climb out of its mouth.

It's dying.

It's dying
because of me.

I grab a hold of it.

Trying to will it to live.

But I can only give it love & thanks.

Its body starts to get soft as it dies.

Almost melting.

I wouldn't mind
dying here with it.

Being at peace.

But I'm alive.

I go to one of the dead soldiers.

I put on his uniform
& take his gun.

I walk away following the path of the other three worms.
